FOREST LIVING

Where the forest becomes your neighbour.

Few homes in Hyderabad enjoy the privilege of living beside hundreds of acres of protected woodland.

At Amaya, the landscape reaches far beyond the site itself. The neighbouring Reserve Forest lends a remarkable sense of openness, while uninterrupted green views and landscaped gardens create spaces to walk, pause, reflect, and enjoy being outdoors. Designed to be experienced rather than admired from afar, these spaces invite residents to slow down, connect with nature, and discover the quiet pleasures of time spent outside.

THE FIVE PILLARS - HEALTHCARE

Care when needed, freedom always.

Reassurance that lives quietly in the background, present when needed, never intrusive.

Healthcare is woven into everyday life rather than imposed upon it. Life-support systems, and ambulance bay and hospital partnerships ensure rapid response when needed.

THE FIVE PILLARS - COMMUNITY

True belonging grows from shared interests, not shared walls.

Amaya is a neighbourhood before it is anything else. Conversations begin in the gardens, friendships form over morning rituals, and bonds deepen on evening walks. A curated calendar brings hobby clubs, speaker series, cultural shows and seasonal celebrations, while residents remain free to participate as they choose. Guest suites and hospitality services make welcoming family effortless, encouraging longer stays and more meaningful time together.

DESIGN PHILOSOPHY

Making places. Abin Design Studio.

"Architecture should create places that age gracefully, enrich everyday life, and always feel deeply connected to their people and context."

- Abin Chaudhuri

Abin Design Studio has received numerous national and international honours, including the International Architecture Award, ARCASIA Awards for Architecture, Kohler Bold Design Award, and IIID Design Excellence Awards. Its work has also been featured by the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA), New York, and recognised among Architectural Digest India's AD100 most influential architects and designers.

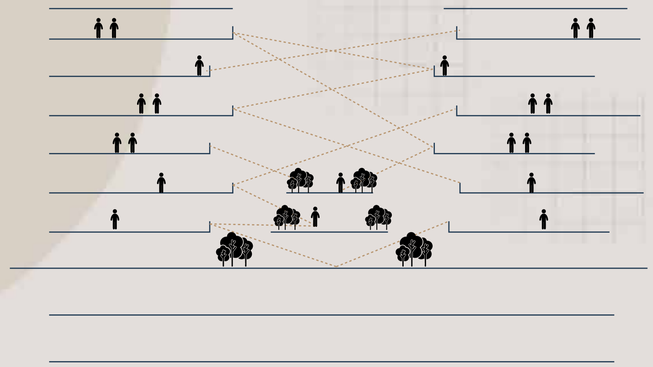

THE CYCLE OF LIFE

An ethos inspired by the cycle of life was developed, shaping the sectional concept of the project, known as "productive collision." This idea promotes constant interaction between residents and nature, fostering a dynamic relationship that encourages community engagement while seamlessly integrating the built environment with natural surroundings.

PRODUCTIVE COLLISION

THE RESIDENCES

Homes that breathe.

Spacious, private and filled with light, planned to the inch around senior life.

Every residence follows a clear, intuitive layout: public areas near the entrance, private zones quietly apart, and natural light in every room. Senior-conscious detailing supports easy movement, safer bathrooms and wide passages. Floor-to-ceiling glass welcomes natural light, fresh air and uninterrupted forest views.

A NOTE FROM THE FOUNDERS

Built for the people we love.

Thank you for taking the time to learn about Amaya.

We began this journey with a simple question: what should life feel like in the years when people finally have the time to live more fully?
Not just safe. Not just comfortable. But independent, dignified, active, connected and quietly joyful.

Amaya has been shaped through conversations with seniors, families, doctors, architects and care specialists. What we heard again and again was the desire for choice. The choice to live independently, to stay socially connected, to be supported without being managed, and to have a home that makes everyday life easier without making it feel smaller. Every decision at Amaya reflects that belief. The openness of the site, the green edge of the reserve forest, the emphasis on healthcare, the senior-friendly homes, the club, the dining, the activities and the service ecosystem have all been planned around one idea: life after retirement should continue to feel rich, capable and self-directed.

We are building Amaya as a long-term commitment, and as a community we would be proud for our own families to call home. We look forward to welcoming you and continuing the conversation.
